

EXTRAORDINARY CASE OF DEATH BY FRIGHT.

A boy named John Driscoll, aged nine years, died at the London Hospital, in consequence of the following very extraordinary circumstances:—It appears that on the 30th of July last the deceased was brought to the hospital by his parents, who are labouring people residing in the neighbourhood of Limerick, city. He was then labouring under extreme debility of the nervous system to such an extent as to give him the appearance of an idiot. His mother was employed to clean out the infant school, and the boy frequently accompanied his mother while she was at work. On one occasion, while she was busily engaged in her employment, he managed to extract three furlings from a missionary collection box which was placed in the school room. This petty theft was, however, discovered, and consultation was held by his mother, the mistress of the school, and a butler to a gentleman, who is one of its principal patrons. The result of this conference was, that it was determined to punish the boy by placing him in a vault underneath the kitchen, to which the school is attached—namely, the Rectory House of Lime-street church. Whatever the original determination of the parties was, the child was kept in this dismal place two days, and one night, and when he was removed it was perceptible that he had undergone a remarkable change. His distressed condition induced his parents to take him to the London Hospital, where every attention appears to have been paid to him. At times he exhibited some symptoms of returning sanity, but as soon as he was questioned as to the cause of his illness he would shriek, and gather himself up as in an agony of fright, and say, "There she is, there is the lady in white! I told them they would kill me when they put me here." He would then relapse into a state of indifference. While in bed in the night he would frequently send forth ejaculations, calling upon God to pardon his sins, and to take him away from this world. No beneficial effect accrued from the medical treatment afforded him, and he daily wasted away, and died on Monday, a complete skeleton. As soon as his death was known, his mother applied for his body, and expressed a wish that no inquest should be held. The officers of the hospital, however, refused to give up the body until they had communicated the extraordinary facts to the coroner. An inquest was accordingly held on Wednesday at the hospital, before Mr. Baker and a respectable jury, when, after an investigation which lasted five hours, a verdict of Natural Death was returned.

FEMALE INFLUENCE.

Of what infinite value to society is that tenderness, compassion, and benevolence, which the Almighty has impressed on the female heart. It is a woman's exclusive gift, it is the foundation of all her virtues; the main-spring of all her usefulness. Let her then daily consider the awful responsibility of such a gift; let her consider it as amongst her most valuable possessions, and solely employ it for the benefit of her fellow creatures; and more especially for the nursing, training, and educating the young of her own species; let her give her heart, her tenderness, her compassion to the infant orphan, and deserted child; let her, in humble imitation of her great Master, become a teacher of the ignorant and an instructor of babes; and let her, like him fold in her arms the lovely emblems of those beings that form the kingdom of heaven. Let her, with active zeal, bring little children to Christ, that he may bless them; and though under her fostering care, no great legislator, prince or prophet, may arise, a superior reward will await her labours—that which is promised to those who save a soul from death. It will be her peculiar and happy lot to rear good Christians and useful members of society; above all, blessed spirits for eternal happiness in communion of saints made perfect.

Mrs. King.

ANECDOTE.

"What is the use," said the pupil of a medical friend of ours one morning to his master on their way to a place of worship, "what is the use of going so often to church, when you only hear the same things over again?" "What is the use," replied his master, "of breakfasting, dining, & supping every day when you only eat the same things over again?" "I do not see," said the youth, that the cases at all resemble each other. "I must eat to support my life and nourish my body, which otherwise would languish and die." The cases are more parallel than you are aware," rejoined the master. "What food is to the body, the ordinances of religion are to the soul. As the natural life in the one will languish and decay, unless we maintain it by the bounties of God's providence so the divine life in the other will wither and pass away, unless we have recourse to the provisions of grace." "How does it happen then," inquired the young man of our friend, "that all have not the same relish for religious exercises, while all have the same appetite for their bodily food?" "There," answered the master, "you again mistake the matter. It is very true that, when our bodies are in health, we relish our daily bread. But when we are sick, it is widely different: we have then not only no relish for our food, but even loathe it; and not unfrequently desire that which is unnatural and injurious. So it is with the soul. When that is at peace with God, it is in health; and not only desires, but relishes these exercises of devotion, and cannot exist without them. But while the soul continues in sin, it is in a state of disease, and having no appetite for spiritual food, it dislikes both the seasons and the exercises of devotion, considers the Lord's day a weariness, and avoids the society of his people. Nor does the resemblance stop even here. For as bodily disease, unless removed by the hand of skill, will speedily terminate our present existence; so the continuance of that spiritual disease, I mean sin, which we derive from our first parents, will issue in the eternal death, which consists in the everlasting exclusion of the soul from the presence and favour of the Creator."—*London. ## THE SILK MANUAL.

SINCLAIR & MOORE and ROBERT SINCLAIR, Jr., proprietors of the Farmer and Gardener, Baltimore, announce to the public that they have just published a complete Manual of the Mulberry and Silk Culture, compiled by the editor of said paper, from the most approved works upon the subject. It will contain—1, a brief historical view of the silk business—2, directions for sowing the Mulberry seed, nurturing the Mulberry plant, transplanting it into hedges, or standard orchards, and the subsequent management thereof—3, the mode of preserving and hatching the silkworm eggs; the manner of rearing and feeding the worms, the mode of airing the laboratories, and the prevention and treatment of their several diseases—4, the manner of constructing a cheap laboratory or cocoonery—5, the process of reeling, dyeing, and making sewing silk, twist, &c., together with calculations of the probable net produce of given quantities of land set in Mulberry, as tested by actual results, both in this country and Europe. In which calculations it will be clearly and satisfactorily demonstrated that an acre of ground properly cultivated in Mulberry, is capable of feeding a sufficient number of worms to realize from the silk raised therefrom, after deducting all expenses of cultivation, a sum exceeding $560. In addition to the interesting matter contained in the manual, which is full upon every subject connected with the culture, it will have a copious and well digested Index, made so easy that any thing required can be found without difficulty. In fine it will comprise every thing that a farmer who desires to enter into the culture need know.

THE subscriber takes this method of informing his friends and former customers, and the public in general, that since the late calamitous fire in this place, he has removed to his old stand next door to Messrs. J. & W. Leach's, corner of Front and Market streets, in the house he first occupied in Cheraw; where he will keep an extensive and cheap stock of goods; consisting in part, of the goods he saved from the fire, and a fresh and general assortment that he has since ordered, which will shortly be received. He flatters himself that he can hold out strong inducements to purchasers. He is determined to sell cheap, for cash, produce, or to approved credit, on a credit, and invites an examination of his stock and price. He has a good many articles, some partly, and others materially damaged by the fire, which he will dispose of as damaged goods at great bargains. He intends to purchase Cotton and other produce as formerly, for which the highest market value will be given. He would take this occasion to remind all those indebted to him by note or account that, in consequence of his severe loss by the fire, early payments of their dues will not only be acceptable, but absolutely necessary to enable him to meet his payments. He earnestly hopes that, under these circumstances, his appeal will not be in vain.
